intelligent young lady. We enjoyed each other's company and later became a couple. The small village of Sunderland has a unique history. It's often said that in the early days of the English Civil War, a royalist, William Penn, came to America to search for a country where his friend, Charles II, could establish a settlement. He bought land on the north bank of the river Wear, which is the boundary between the county of Durham and the county of Northumberland. Penn settled in the area of Sunderland and is buried in the old parish church. Millennia ago, the Durham miners, a group of professional miners with specialized skills, began their work, deep underground in mines on the banks of the River Wear. Their history is fascinating and continues into the present. You can visit the mines on a mine tour and see how things have changed since they first began. I was visiting a friend in the town of Castle Eden, about one hour's drive north of London, in the early summer of 1972. We were sitting in his room, watching the news on television, when he said, "That's a great looking woman who's been in the news lately. She's attractive and seems like a smart woman. She might be something for you." My friend, Pete, was looking for a suitable match and had thought that I might be a good choice. I had met the woman in question and found her to be a wonderful person who knew herself and her worth. Though it's a small town, we see it on the television a lot. Alarming statistics tell us that many of the New York City boroughs are on the road to becoming cities of disaster. No one in public office seems to be taking the situation seriously. One of the results is many New Yorkers are deciding to leave the city. John Lennon, a performer and composer, was in the United States in the early spring of 1972. The New York State trooper assigned to him took him to court for driving with a suspended license. The record-breaking press conference in which he took full responsibility for his actions and expressed the hope that 82157476af
